WAS ATTORNEY FOR STANDARD OIL

But Terminated Such Service Before Federal Prosecution Begun And Before He Was Elected To U. S. Senate.

In a speech in behalf of the independence party at Columbus, Ohio, last evening, William R. Hearst charged U. S. Senator J. B. Foraker with accepting two checks from the Standard Oil company for the alleged use of his influence to defeat pending legislation, and read what purported to be copies of letters written by John D. Archibald, of the Standard Oil Co., to the Ohio senator, and mentioning enclosures of checks—one for $15,000 and the other for $14,500. The text of three of them was as follows:

"Kill Objectionable Bill"

26 Broadway, New York, Feb. 16, 1908.—My Dear Senator: Here is still another very objectionable bill. It is an outrageous one to be rid of, and I hope there will be no difficulty in killing it. Am anxious to hear from you as to the situation as a whole.

JOHN D. ARCHIBALD.

We are greatly at a loss in the matter, but I send this and will be glad to have a very frank talk with you when opportunity offers if you so desire. I need scarcely again express our great gratification over the favorable outcome of affairs.

The men were the members of the democratic state Press association and the occasion of the gathering was their fourth biennial meeting. Some business was transacted during the day but for the most part the time was taken up with informal discussions on politics and topics relating to newspaper making. Great plans have been made for the banquet that will mark the wind-up of the convention. President J. T. ## THEATRICAL OUTLOOK GLOOMY THIS SEASON

Financial Depression of Last Winter Is Still Affecting This Line.
[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
New York, Sept. 18.—For theatrical managers and players the season of 1908-09 is going to be the worst that has been experienced in over a decade. This is the prevailing opinion among the members of the profession and though the season has just begun the prediction is already being borne out by the facts. While the depression that has existed since last fall appears to be lifting for other lines of business there has not appeared as yet any signs of returning prosperity in the theatrical business. Several Broadway shows that were put on for a run only a week or two ago have closed on account of poor business and the managers are hustling to find attractions that may meet with a greater degree of public favor. Many shows, of course, have started on the road with the opening of the season, but the number of players who have been unable to find engagements is still surprisingly large and it is predicted that before the snow flies the ranks will be increased through the failure of shows that will be unable to weather through the season.

Both men, who appeared to enjoy friendly relations, had skated up the river to cut timber, and when near the bush the evidence indicated that Paul had made his skates the chief instrument in the horrible murder, that was discovered a few days later, when Paul's skates were found near the body.

CALLS SPECIAL SESSION TO DISCUSS NIGHT RIDERS

Indiana Legislature Will Also Provide Money For Carrying On Expenses Of State.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Indianapolis, Ind., Sept. 18.—Coming as it does on the eve of the election the proceedings of the Indiana legislature, which convened in special session today, will be watched with more than ordinary interest. The ostensible object of Governor Hanly in calling the extraordinary session was to provide for necessary appropriations to carry on the business of the state and, what is regarded as of even greater importance, to take action in the "night rider" troubles of southern Indiana. The governor declares that the conditions that have existed there have bordered on a state of anarchy and he fears that the troubles are about to recur, as the season for cutting the tobacco crop is close at hand.
Other subjects will be taken up by the legislature, however, and the politicians of both parties are speculating more on these matters of prospective legislation than on the action that may be taken in regard to appropriations and the tobacco riders. The democrats are preparing to make a fight for several measures, and their attitude toward the governor's bills probably will be determined by what the republicans concede to them. They will make a great play at the special session against so-called extravagance and waste in the state administration, and while it is not expected that anything will be accomplished in the matter the discussion may have an important bearing on the present campaign. The democrats will demand the repeal of the metropolitan police law and the enactment of a law guaranteeing deposits in state banks. As the democratic platform declares for local option with the township or ward as the unit, the democrats will oppose the county unit plan of Governor Hanly.

MADISON IS EXPECTING TO ENTERTAIN 15,000

At Farmers' National Congress Which Opens Thursday Next—Taft And Bryan Will Be Drawing-Cards.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Madison, Wis., Sept. 18.—Next week Madison will be visited by probably 15,000 strangers, among them leading agriculturists from all over the country, to attend the Farmers' National Congress, which begins on Thursday and continues for a week. On the first two days the two nominators of the great political parties will make addresses, which occasions will attract thousands of visitors from miles around the city. W. H. Taft comes for a speech Friday night, and W. J. Bryan will be here the next day. Local committees are at work listing available quarters for the many strangers, and citizens are preparing to open their homes to care for the visitors who will be unable to find accommodations at the hotels. The speeches by the two presidential candidates will be under the auspices of the executive committee of the Farmers' National Congress and not under the auspices of the campaign committees of the parties, and it is expected that neither will make a campaign speech, but will speak to the congress in non-partisan attitude. However, it is not popularly believed that these politicians will neglect the opportunity to say something bearing upon the campaign. Besides these speakers, there will be present men of national importance in agriculture and politics.

PROMOTERS OF DISCORD BOUND TO HAVE FIGHT

McGovern Will Consult With Friends Before Stepping Down And Out—Big Fire Near Medford—Other State News.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Milwaukee, Wis., Sept. 18.—The republican platform committee which will meet at Madison next Tuesday will be asked to investigate the charges that money was used in excess in the recent primary election, particularly in the campaign for the senatorial nomination. Resolutions which will be printed have been prepared and called for the appointment of a committee of three senatorial nominees and six assembly nominees to conduct the proposed inquiry. The resolutions are not to come from out-and-out La Follette men, but it is understood that they will be supported by them when they are introduced. The reason back of the move is said to be a belief that money was spent too freely at the primaries.
Revived Talk of Contest
Milwaukee, Wis., Sept. 18.—Friends of District Attorney Francis E. McGovern say he will not make his decision as to whether or not he will enter the field for a contest before the legislature for the U. S. senatorship until he has had a chance to confer with his friends of the legislature at the candidates' convention next week. It is understood to be the plan of Mr. McGovern to go to Madison Sunday night and get ready to meet his friends Monday and Tuesday and to ask from them what his future course shall be with reference to making a fight before the legislature for the office of U. S. senator. If Mr. McGovern's friends encourage him in the matter, his candidacy will probably be announced very soon.
Deeds Starts Contest
Madison, Wis., Sept. 18.—A contest was started today by George E. Beadle for the republican nomination of insurance commissioner against J. E. Abbott who has 136 majority on the face of the returns. On Beadle's protest the state canvassing board held the matter open 10 days for investigation and correction. The returns of Milwaukee and Green counties were ordered returned for correction. Beadle claims incorrect returns from Milwaukee county and that the vote of the third ward of Monroe, Green county, was omitted. Both candidates have engaged attorneys.

A Quicker Way To Wash Clothes,

An easier way, a better way—the P. & G. Naphtha Soap way.

P. & G. Naphtha Soap is used by women who have learned, by actual experience, that there is a better way, an easier way, a quicker way to wash clothes than the old-fashioned, work-all-day-in-a-hot-room way.

These women no longer boil their clothes.

They no longer rub the life out of them on a wash-board.

They no longer stand for hours over tubs of hot water—the steam of which makes everything in the room, damp and uncomfortable.

Best of all: By using P. & G. Naphtha Soap, they are able to do as much work in a morning as used to take a whole day.

FALLS TO DEATH WITH AEROPLANE

LIEUT. SELFIDGE OF SIGNAL CORPS IS KILLED.

ORVILLE WRIGHT INJURED

Breaking of Propeller Blade Causes
Tragic Accident at Fort
Myer in the Presence of Thousands.

Washington, Sept. 18.—After having drawn the attention of the world to his aeroplane flights at Fort Myer and having established new world's records for heavier-than-air flying machines, Orville Wright Thursday met with a tragic mishap while making a two-man flight. The aeroplane was accompanied by Lieut. Thomas E. Selfridge of the signal corps of the army. Lieut. Selfridge was fatally injured and died at 8:10 o'clock at night. Mr. Wright was seriously injured, but is expected to recover.

While the machine was encircling the drill grounds a propeller blade snapped off and hitting some other part of the intricate mechanism, caused the machine to overturn in the air and fall to the ground, enveloping the two occupants in the debris.

Quick Help for the Injured. Soldiers and spectators ran across the field to where the aeroplane had fallen and assisted in lifting Mr. Wright and Lieut. Selfridge from under the tangled mass of machinery, rods, wires and shreds of metal. Mr. Wright was conscious and said: "Oh, hurry and lift the motor." Lieut. Selfridge was unconscious and had apparently struck the ground with great force. His head was covered with blood and he was choking when the soldiers extricated him from under the machine.

Dr. Watters, a New York physician, was one of the first to reach the spot and rendered first aid to the injured men. When their wounds had been bandaged Mr. Wright and Lieut. Selfridge were taken to the Fort Myer hospital, at the other end of the field. It was feared that Mr. Wright was suffering from internal injuries. He had lapsed into semi-consciousness by the time he reached the hospital, while Lieut. Selfridge did not regain consciousness at all. He was suffering from a fracture at the base of the skull.

Wright Not Dangerously Hurt.

After a hurried surgical examination it was announced that Mr. Wright was not dangerously injured. He is suffering from a fracture of his left thigh and several ribs on the left side are broken. Both men received deep cuts about the head. Mr. Wright regained consciousness at the hospital and dictated a cablegram to his brother at Le Mans, France, and requested that the same message be sent to his sister and father at Dayton, O., assuring them that he was all right.

Although there have been but a handful of people at the aeronautical testing grounds at Fort Myer during the past few days, fully 2,000 had gathered by 4:30 Thursday afternoon, gathered by 4:30 Thursday afternoon and witnessed the tragedy.

Machine Turns Over and Falls.

While the machine was turning at the southern end of the field, several thousand feet from the spectators, some one shouted:

"What is that? Something fell!"

Immediately all eyes were on the aeroplane, and it was seen to turn over on its left side and, passing a moment, it made a complete turn and then came swooping to the earth in a cloud of dust. No effort on the part of the aviator could possibly have averted the accident. Planes and rudders were absolutely incapable of righting the machine when it had turned in that manner.

Several officers who were standing around the starting apparatus ordered the mounted soldiers over to the wreck, but spectators, soldiers, officers and newspaper men were already running across the field.

Propellers Were New.

Mr. Wright Wednesday replaced the propellers which he has been using with another pair, the blades of which are six inches longer. They were used for the first time in Thursday's disastrous flight, and many who have witnessed Mr. Wright's flights at Fort Myer believe the change of propellers caused the accident. An examination of the broken blades showed that it had been snapped off at a point one-fourth of the distance from the hub. A deep indentation of the broken piece indicated that it had struck some other part of the aeroplane. Octave Chanute, the father of aeronautics in America, who came to Washington several days ago for the purpose of seeing Orville Wright's flights, examined the wreckage. He said that if the Wrights had used but one propeller instead of two the result would have been at least as serious.

Only Thursday morning Mr. Wright had been asked what the result would be if one of his propellers broke while the machine was in flight. "The other propeller would tend to turn the machine around," he said, "but I would stop the motor and glide to the earth."

Wright Realized the Danger. Orville Wright had confidently hoped and expected to meet all the requirements without a serious flaw developing in the machine his genius had devised. He realized, however, the danger to which the work subjected him.

It was but a few days ago that he said the greatest danger which he had to face was his own inexperience and the possibility that he may do something wrong in making the flights. He commented on the change in the methods of operating the levers as compared with his previous machines, and pointed out that where the movements in the old machine were instinctive the same was not the case in the last machine, and that with the latter the operator had "to think, which is dangerous on account of the possibility of not thinking fast enough."

Selfridge an Enthusiast. Lieut. Thomas E. Selfridge was one of the most enthusiastic believers in aeronautics among the officers in the military service and through his own efforts succeeded in securing a detail with the aeronautical division of the signal corps. He was born in San Francisco 26 years ago and was appointed to the military academy at West Point from that state. He was apparently a second lieutenant in the artillery corps in 1903 and commissioned a first lieutenant four years later.

While with the Fifth field artillery he became interested in the work of Prof. Alexander Graham Bell, who was experimenting with tetrahedral kites, and about a year ago Lieut. Selfridge was attached to the signal corps. He was made secretary of the Aerial Experiment Association and went to Hammondsport, N. Y., to continue his work in aeronautics. He supervised the construction of the first aeroplane built by the experiment association, the Red Wing, which made a successful flight at Hammondsport on March 12 last.

French Aeroplane Wrecked.

Angers, France, Sept. 18.—Reno Gasnier, the aeronaut, met with a nasty accident while making tests with his machine Thursday afternoon. The connecting rod of the planes broke and the machine crashed down from a height of 25 feet. Gasnier was severely cut about the head and the aeroplane was wrecked.

HENRY B. QUINBY NOMINATED.

Laconia Man Heads Republican Ticket in New Hampshire.

Concord, N. H., September 18.—The political strife which for many months has split the Republican party in New Hampshire into three factions came to an end late Thursday when Henry B. Quinby of Laconia was nominated for governor by the Republican state convention in session in this city. Two ballots were necessary for a choice, and on the decisive one Quinby had a margin of only five votes.

On the first Quinby polled 372 votes, when 395 were necessary for nomination. Rosecrans W. Pillsbury of Londonderry was a strong second, receiving 232 votes on the first ballot and 246 on the second. Pillsbury's net loss on the second ballot was only six votes.

Helen, Mont., Sept. 18.—After a protracted fight on the floor of the convention which lasted almost three hours, Edward Donlan of Missoula was nominated for governor at midnight. Five ballots were necessary to determine the party's choice. Donlan was opposed for the nomination by former United States Senator Leo Maibohm of Butte and Charles M. Webster of Great Falls, both of whom were supported by strong delegations.

Argues That Christ Was an Aryan.

Oxford, England, Sept. 18.—The International Congress of the History of Religions was aroused to a high pitch of excitement Thursday by a paper presented by Prof. Paul Haupt of Johns Hopkins university, Baltimore, in which he endeavored to demonstrate by a process of ethnological reasoning that Christ was not a Jew, but an Aryan.

Want ads bring results.

It was all a risk to leave the house there, without the protection of nickel-plated walls and timelocks; but a risk that must be taken. She dared not remain in her possession; and she would contrive a way in the morning to communicate with Maitland and warn him.

Her gaze searched the area where the lamplight fell soft yet strong upon the dark shining wood and heavy brass desk fittings; and paused, arrested by the unusual combination of ivory bowl and superimposed book. A riddle to be read with facility; in a twinkling she had uncovered the incriminating hand-print—incriminating if it could be traced, that is to say.

"Oh!" she cried, softly, and laughed a little. "Oh, how careless!" Fine brows puckered, she pondered the matter, and ended by placing her own hand over the print; this one fitted the other exactly.

"How he must have wondered! He is sure to look again, especially if—"

No need to conclude the sentence. Quickly she placed bag and case squarely on top of the impression, the bowl over all, and the book upon the bowl; then, drawing from her pocket a pair of long gray silk gloves, draped one across the book; and, held tight to one side, admired the effect.

It seemed decidedly an article of effect, admirably calculated to attract attention. She was satisfied to the point of being pleased with herself; a fact indicated by an expressive flutter of slim, fair hands. And now, to work! Thus pressed, and—A cloud dimmed the radiance of her eyes; irresolutely she shifted in her chair, troubled, frowning, lips woefully drooping, and sighed. And a still small whisper, broken and wretched, disturbed the quiet of the study.

"I can not! O, I can not! To spoil it all, now, when—"

Yet she must. She must forget herself and steel her determination with the memory that another's happiness hung in the balance, depended upon her success. Twice she had tried and failed. This third time she must succeed.

And bowing her head in token of her resignation, she turned back squarely to face the desk. As she did so the toe of one small shoe caught against something on the floor, causing a dull jangling sound. She stooped, with a low exclamation, and straightened up, a small bunch of keys in her hand; eight or ten of them dangling from a silver ring; Maitland's keys.

He must have dropped them there, forgetting them altogether. A find of value and one to save her a deal of trouble; skeleton keys are so exasperatingly slow, particularly when used by inept hands. But how to bring herself to make use of these? All's fair in war (and this was a sort of war, a war of wits at least); but one should fight with one's own arms, not plier the enemy's and turn them against him. To use these keys to ransack Maitland's desk seemed an action ever more bludgily dishonorable than this clandestine visit, this midnight foray.

Swinging the notched metal slips from a slender finger, she contemplated them; and laughed ruefully. What qualms of conscience in a burglar, self-confessed! She was there for a purpose, a recognized, notorious purpose. Granted. Then why quibble? She would not quibble. She would be firm, resolute, determined, cold-blooded, unimpaired of all kindness and courtesy and—She would use them, accomplish her purpose, and have done, finally and for ever, with the whole hateful business!

There was a bright spot of color on either cheek and a hot light of anger in her eyes as she set about her task. It would never be less hideous, never less immediate.

The desk drawers yielded easily to the eager keys. One by one she had them open and their contents explored—vain repetition of yesterday afternoon's fruitless task. But she must be sure, she must leave no stone unturned. Maitland Manor was closed to her for ever, because of last night. But how she was safe for a few short hours, and free to make assurance doubly sure.

There remained the dispatch box, the black japanned tin box which had proved obstinate yesterday. She had come prepared to break its lock this time, if need be; Maitland's carelessness spared her the necessity. She lifted it out of a lower drawer, and put it in her lap. The smallest key fitted the lock at the first attempt. The lid came up and—

Perhaps it is not altogether discreditable that one should temporarily forget one's own compunctions in the long-deferred moment of triumph. The girl uttered a little cry of joy. Crash!—the front door downstairs had been slammed.

She was on her feet in a breath, faint with fear. Yet not so overcome that she forgot her errand, her success. As she stood up she dropped the dispatch box back into the drawer, without a sound, and, opening her hand-bag, stuffed something into it.

No time to do more; a dull rumble of masculine voices was distinctly, fearfully audible in the stillness of the house; voices of men conversing together in the inner vestibule. One laughed, and the laugh seemed to penetrate her beam like a knife. Then both strode across the tiled and began to absent, he was clearly told her by footsteps sounding deadened on the padded carpet.

Panic-stricken, she turned to the student lamp and with a quick twist and upward jerk of the chimney-catch extinguished the flame. A reek of smoke immediately began to foul the close, hot air; and she knew that it would betray her, but was helpless to stop it. Howled, she was caught, trapped, damned beyond redemption unless—unless it were not Maitland, after all, but one of the other tenants, unexpectedly returned and bound for another flat.

Futile hope. Upon the landing by the door the footsteps ceased; and a key grated in the wards of the lock.

Blind with terror, her sole thought an instinctive impulse to hide and so avert discovery until the last possible instant, and on the bare chance of something happening to save her, the girl caught up her skirts and fled like a hunted shadow through the alcove, through the bed chamber, thence down the hall toward the dining room and kitchen offices.

The outer door was being opened ere she had reached the hiding place she had in mind—the trunk closet—from which, she remembered remarking, a window opened upon a fire-escape. It was barely possible, a fighting chance.

She closed the door, grateful that its latch slipped silently into place, and fairly flung herself upon the window, painfully brushing her soft hands in vain endeavor to raise the sash. It stuck obstinately, would not yield. Too late, she remembered that she had forgotten to draw the catch—fatal oversight! A sob of terror choked in her throat. Already footsteps were hurrying down the hall; a line of light brightened underneath the door; voices, excitedly keyed, banded question and comment, an unmistakable Irish brogue mingling with a clear enunciation which she had but too great reason to remember. The pair had passed into the next room. She could hear O'Hagan's announcer: "No wait here, sir."

"Then it's the dining room, or the trunk closet. Come along!" One last, frantic attempt! But the window catch, rusted with long disuse, stuck. Panting, sick with fear, the girl leaped away and crashed her head into a corner, crouching on the floor behind a heavy box, her dark cloak drawn up to shield her head.

And the door opened. A flood of radiance from the re-lighted student lamp fell athwart the floor. The girl lay close and still, holding her breath.

Ten seconds, perhaps, ticked on into eternity; seconds that were in themselves eternities. Then: "No one here, O'Hagan."

The door was closed, and through its panels more faintly came: "Faith, war, a war of wits at least; but one should fight with one's own arms, not plier the enemy's and turn them against him. To use these keys to ransack Maitland's desk seemed an action ever more bludgily dishonorable than this clandestine visit, this midnight foray."

The girl tried to rise, to make again for the window; but it was as though her limbs had turned to water; there was no strength in her; and the blackness came visibly before her eyes, radiating away in whirling, streaky circles.

Even such resolution and strong will as was hers could not prevail against that numbing, deadly exhaustion. Her eyes closed and her head fell back against the wall.

It seemed but an instant (though it was in point of fact a full five minutes) ere the sound of a voice again roused her.

She looked up, dazzled by a gush of warm light.

He stood in the doorway, holding the lamp high above his head, his face pale, grave, and shadowed as he peered down at her.

"I have sent O'Hagan away," he said, gently. "If you will please to come, now—"

CHAPTER IX.

Procrastination.

The cab which picked Maitland up at his lodgings carried him but a few blocks to the club at which he had, the previous evening, entertained his lawyer. Maitland had selected it as the one of all the clubs of which he and Dannerman were members, wherein he was least likely to meet the latter.

Neither frequented its sober precincts by habit, its severe and classical building on a corner of Madison avenue overlooking the square, is but the outward presentment of an intention to be a member of which is a duty, but emphatically no great pleasure, to the sons of a New York family of any prominence.

But in its management the younger generation holds no suffrage; and is not slow to declare that the Primordial is rightly named, characterizing the individual members of the board of governors as unedifying, prehistoric monsters who have never learned that laughter lends a savor to existence. And so it is that the younger generation (which is understood to include Maitland and Dannerman), while it religiously pays its dues and has the name of the Primordial engraved upon its cards, shuns those dandy respectable rooms and seeks its comfort elsewhere.

Maitland found it dull and depressing enough, that same evening, something before seven. The spacious and impressive lounging rooms were but sparsely tenanted, other than by the usual corps of servants; and the few members who had lent the open doors the excuse of their presence wore of the elderly type that hides itself behind a newspaper in an easy chair and snorts when addressed.

The young man strolled disconsolately enough into the billiard room.

Registering Under the Name of "Mr. Daniels."

thence (dogged by a specter of loneliness) to the bar, and finally, in sheer desperation, to the dining room, where he selected a table and ordered an evening paper with his meal.

When the former was brought him, he sat up and began to take a new interest in life. The glaring headlines that met his eyes on the front page proved as bracing as a slap in the face.

"The Maitland Jewels," he read, half aloud: "Daring Attempt at Burglary. 'Mad' Maitland Catches 'Hand-some Dan' Anstey in the Act of Cracking His Safe at Maitland Manor. Which Was Which? Both Principals Disappear."

A dull red glow suffused the reader's countenance; he compressed his lips, only opening them once, and then to emit a monosyllabic oath, which can hardly have proved any considerable relief to his surcharged emotional nature.

The news-story was exploited as a "beat"; it could have been little else, since snippets of its "exclusive details" had been born full-blown from the second imagination of a busy reporter to whom Maitland had refused an interview while in his bath, some three hours earlier. Maitland discovered with relief that he had down to essentials it consisted simply of the statement that somebody (presumably himself) had caught somebody (presumably Anstey) burglarizing the library safe at Maitland Manor that morning; that one of the comedians (no one knew which) had overpowered the other and left him in charge of the butler, who had presently permitted his prisoner to escape and then talked for publication.

It was not to this so much that Maitland objected. It was the illustrations that alternately saddened and maddened the young man; the said illustrations comprising blurred half-tone reproductions of photographs taken on the Maitland estate; a diagram of the library, as fanciful as the text it illuminated, and two portraits, side by side, of the heroes, himself and Anstey, excellent likenesses both of the originals and of each other.

Mr. Maitland did not enjoy his dinner. Anxious and preoccupied, he tasted the dishes mechanically; and when they had all passed before him, took his thoughts and a cigar to a gloomy corner of the smoking room, where he sat for two solid hours, debating the matter pro and con, and arriving at no conclusion whatever, save that Higgins was doomed.

OREGON STORE WAS ROBBED LAST NIGHT

McDermott's General Store Entered Last Evening and Jewelry Taken.

Chief of Police Appleby this afternoon received a telephone message from Sheriff Killebrew of Duna county asking him to be on the lookout for two suspicious characters, the store of Mr. McDermott at Oregon having been entered some time ago and the two ladies and gentlemen who were about the same number of minutes. The thieves gained entrance through a back door and from the fact that a light was on and a stiff black hat were also taken, it is believed that there were two of them.

KNIGHTS TEMPLAR TO CELEBRATE JUBILEE

Janesville Commandery Was One of the Three to Organize Grand Commandery Fifty Years Ago.

On October 12 the Wisconsin Grand Commandery, Knights Templar, will celebrate its golden jubilee in Madison. The day before she tugged and wrestled with the dough for half an hour in the kitchen, with her hands up to her elbows all mucked up with soft dough. Is it any wonder that she is now a member of the Grand Commandery of Wisconsin? Judge Palmer will deliver one of the chief addresses.

Fifty years ago the first Wisconsin Grand Commandery was formed in Madison by Wisconsin commandery, Milwaukee; the Janesville commandery, Madison, Judge Palmer and David H. Wright are the only living members of this first commandery.

A year after its organization, there were 111 knights templar in its membership. A year ago its members numbered 3,535, and at present it is believed that the membership is 4,200 knights, who belong to thirty-three grand commanderies. Of the thirty-one grand commanderies who have held office, twelve are dead.

The celebration will be held in the assembly of Robert Macony commandery, besides Judge Palmer, Right Excellent Grand Commander Alvin P. Kletzsch will speak, and it is expected that Gov. Davidson will make the address of welcome. A feature of the exercises will be a grand prize drill. It is hoped that all of the commanderies will send teams to compete.

EXCUSE MY FINGERS

Too Formal for "Fighting Bob."
An officer who was with Admiral Evans at San Francisco writes home that he was one day talking with "Fighting Bob" when a petty officer appeared on the scene. The under officer, not recognizing the two, came blustering up with, "Say, do you know where I can find Evan?" The admiral gazed up at him quietly a moment and exclaimed: "Oh, don't bother about being so formal. Just call me 'Bob.'"

A Difference of Taste.
One of the eastern papers has been discussing the subject of "The Sort of Woman Men Admire." Considering the sort of women some of them have married, tastes seem to differ, taking it for granted that they admired their wives in the first place.

Charities.
We tell our charities, not because we wish to be praised for them, not because we think they have great merit, but for our justification. It is a capital blunder, as you discover, when another man rectifies his charities.

Flour Dusted During Civil War.

While the grading of Main street, Manassas, Va., was in progress recently the workmen discovered that their picks went to a depth that indicated a subterranean cavity. Upon investigation it was discovered that a trench to the depth of three feet had been dug and a number of barrels of flour put therein and concealed from the enemy on the evacuation of Manassas by the confederate troops. A large quantity of barrel staves and a white substance resembling decayed flour were exhumed.

Native "Diri" Most Popular.
Even the extraordinarily low-priced cigarettes with which American manufacturers have flooded India hardly hold their own with the native "dir." The "dir" is now made in large quantities at Tirora. The tobacco is brought from so far afield as Madras and Assam.

An Unknown Industry.
Bagdad has no newspapers in which it would pay to advertise. There is really but one publication, and that devotes its columns entirely to government notices.

HOW SVEN HEDIN EXPLORED TIBET

SWEDISH TRAVELER TELLS OF PERILOUS JOURNEY.

EVASDED SPIES BY A RUSE

Was Disguised as Native Animal Driver While His Caravan Passed Through a Vast Unknown Tract.

London, Sept. 18.—A special dispatch from Simla, British India, says that by deceiving the Tibetans regarding his intentions, Sven Hedin, the Swedish explorer who has just arrived there after extended explorations in Tibet, was enabled to evade the Tibetan spies when he started in December, 1907. "A short distance from Karakorum pass he turned due east, and in a continuous fall of snow, and amid great hardships, he reached Akasi Chin lake in January. From that on the snow obliterated the roads and the caravan was in terrible straits.

Suffer from Bitter Cold.

Some of the party suffered from frost-bites and Dr. Hedin's feet were frozen. It became necessary to kill off their flock of sheep for food. Eventually, however, the explorers reached Shimenato. Here friendly nomads resupplied them with animals and a 20 days' march east and southeast, passing Lem Chang lake, brought the explorers to a point where the plunge into the unknown had to be made.

After burning their European clothes and everything indicating their nationality and hiding their money and instruments in rice bags, Dr. Hedin adopted a disguise of a common Ladhaki, daily painting his hands and face a dark color and pretending to be a driver of animals.

When wandering tribes met them, Karim, a trustworthy man, familiar with Tibet, was posing as the head of the caravan. Thus they traveled without discovery for two months in a furious gale through an unknown tract, ending at Tokato.

Pass Enormous Ice Mountain.

From March 8 they traversed the northern edge of a great tract between latitudes 30 and 32, stretching from his old route to the Brahmaputra river, which was the great object of his journey. The explorers then marched due south, crossing several ranges running east and west, and passed the enormous ice mountain known as the Shinkangshan, on the east, from which point flowed a big river.

Thence they crossed the Ladang pass into an open valley, and Dongda province, which no European has ever entered, before them. Here, Dr. Hedin discovered the remains of a caution were observed, the explorers had several narrow escapes from discovery by the watchful Tibetans.

Dr. Hedin discovered Lake Chunliao and followed his west shore for a whole day and first heard of the great salt lake of Tabla Taakha, which is a source of considerable wealth to the government from the salt exports.

Auction of Oklahoma Town Lots.

Washington, Sept. 18.—The acting secretary of the interior has issued regulations for the sale at auction of 1,000 town lots, adjoining Lawton, Okla., and has appointed James W. Witten, chief law officer of the general land office, to superintend the sale, which occurs at Lawton on November 15.

Of Two Evils.

"Neddie's wife came for him at the club last night," said Gallely. "Wasn't that humiliating?"

"Well," replied Owlett, "I don't know whether it's worse for your wife to come for you at the club or go for you after you've got home from the club."

A Bit of Information About Our Marvellous Wash Goods Stock

We say "marvellous," as that is the impression most people get after seeing our stock and making comparisons with ordinary stock about town.

It is an advantage we have over the average merchant who buys a few pieces at a time when he needs them and has to take what he can get. It means a great deal to have such an enormous assortment to select from. The Big Store is fully equipped to supply your fall needs.
